Expect the Unexpected

Building a relationship with the world you are in and the world you want to create is the objective of this workshop.

During 5 days we discover and train our creative capacities through sensitive relationship with objects, each other, the context, living dynamics and the whole.

We work with the four elements from the Chekhov technique, ease, form, beauty and the entirety as creative activities. We discover our bodies as fine tuned instruments to support the creative process.

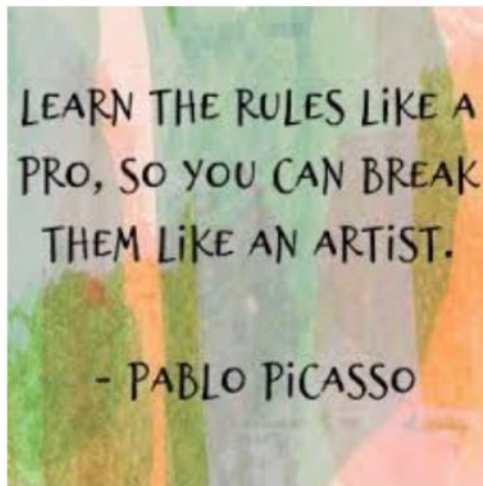

A learning experience, in which we work with both facilitators every day. We exercise as an ensemble as well as in smaller groups. We will use scene's, improvisation, observation techniques and physical exercises as training of our creative skills. And we take all individual learning questions as the basis of the program we deliver.

Marjolein Baars and Peter Paul Gerbrands ; share a love for transformation and the openness to learn from the creative processes. The Michael Chekhov acting technique is the common ground between us and the approach to our work
